The Municipal Market of Kos is a small indoor municipal market (Δημοτική Αγορά Dimotiki Agora) on the edge of Eleftherias square, opposite the archaeological Museum. The central atrium is still used as an open market, while the side stores have been converted into cofee shops and restaurants. In the Municipal Market of Kos, you will find a lot of fresh fruit along with dried fruit (figs, apricots ets) and loads of local products and different kinds of herbs and spices. There are plenty of potential gift ideas and souvenirs to be considered but the local honey and olive oil are probably among the most traditional and typical products that you could purchase
