When Christakis arrived in Athens from Constantinople in 1934 he dedicated himself to the art of shirtmaking. Christakis' relentless attention to quality was so apparent that his handmade shirts gained the trust of the most significant personalities of the time.

As the decades went by, his fame grew out of the borders and he was considered an expert on sartorial menswear. Choosing strictly the best fabrics from Switzerland's top mills and sewing them with dexterity Christakis managed to be the "most well-known shirtmaker in Athens".
